Beste Medelanders,

The Committee is in full swing in preparation for the upcoming AGM on the 24th of October. (See the advert on page 10 of this magazine).

I encourage anyone of our Members to step forward and have a chat about joining the Committee. Help us help our Members.

Please find attached to this Magazine a "Committee Nomination Form" and an "Appointment of Proxy Voting Form."

I have heard some really amazing feedback related to our Anniversary Lunch. What a great effort it was.

Thanks John Zwartkruis for the organization it. I can't wait to see what John will have in store for us regarding the upcoming "Leiden's Onzet".

Keep your eyes on the upcoming events list, there will be something for all to enjoy. (Halloween flyer enclosed).

Please also add the AGM to your diaries, as I would encourage all Member to come along.

Een vriendelijke groet,

Eric van Waaijenburg,
President.

Romy Bruinsa at the July Maas en Waal Borrel.

On Friday July 30th we had the pleasure of hearing Romy Bruinsa as our life act at the Maas & Waal Borrel. She was the youngest act we have had. She was just 17 years old. Romy B was on the Dutch Community Radio as a guest some weeks ago and that's how the Neerlandia Committee heard of her.

We thought that she would be a very nice act on the stage of the Rhein Donau Club and we were not disappointed.

She performed for 2 hours with a number of famous and well-known songs as well as her own songs. Yes, Romy is not just a Singer, she is a Singer/Songwriter.

We did also notice that the people that were present on the night, seem to enjoy her music very much and were impressed by her musical capability at such a young age. We will most likely want to host her again and surely hope that she and her family will join us once again, when asked.

Machiel van der Stelt.
Vic-President.

Neerlandia's Anniversary Lunch

Neerlandia's 52nd Anniversary Lunch.

More than 150 Members and Guests turned up at this sponsored Lunch at the RDC. They all came to have an enjoyable afternoon and they were not disappointed.

In the absence of Eric, the Neerlandia President, the task of welcoming everyone was delegated to John Zwartkruis.

That was not the only task that fell on his shoulders, as he then continued on as Master of Ceremonies.

It did not take long for all the seats to be taken up.

And with unlimited coffee available and the bar open, everyone soon settled in and made themselves at home.

The food was very well presented with Spring Rolls for Entrée and a choice of Chicken or Fish for the Main Meal.

After Mains it was time for a Quiz. Two or three sheets per table had been distributed on which 20 answers had to be filled in, 10 on animals and another 10 on the Netherlands. John asked the questions and some specific names of groups of certain animals., such as owls or hippos. Not easy.

The eventual winners had a remarkable good score.

After that was over, Strudel with warm custard was served. It was yummy. That left the door prizes. Not less than 12 boxes of chocolate and 12 bottles of Dutch Advocaat were the prizes.

No wonder everyone was in a good mood and soon after they started to Depart, feeling happy.

It was a great afternoon. Many thanks to the Neerlandia Committee for their Sponsorship, the Events Co-ordinators for organising this yearly event and a special thanks to Jan Zwartkruis for his role as Master of Ceremonies.

Editor.

Stuff Dutch people Like

"Stuff Dutch People Like" is a column written by an expatriate living in the Netherlands. This amusing column observes the Dutch in their everyday life. We hope that you enjoy reading "Stuff Dutch People Like" as much as we do. The blog is available via the internet.

HAGELSLAG.

The thing that shocks me most about Dutch people's peculiar eating habits is Hagelslag. I giggled to myself, when seeing a room of adult Dutch business men: was amazed at the pride Dutch people exhibited while sucking on drop; and I marvelled at the nation's copious dairy consumption — but hagelslag stopped me dead in my tracks. Did I just see that correctly?!? Are grown-ups really eating chocolate sprinkles on their toast at lunch?!

For those of you, who have yet to spend more than a few days in the lowlands, I will explain. Hagelslag is Dutch people's answer to sprinkles. But don't be fooled — these are a different kind of sprinkle than you are used to. In North America sprinkles are primarily reserved for ice-cream and cakes and normally for the likes of children, but here in the Netherlands, it is apparently a perfectly normal behaviour for an adult to merrily sprinkle some fruit or chocolate flavoured sprinkles on their sandwich at mealtime.

Now, Hagelslag comes in many varieties; you can have chocolate Hagelslag, fruit flavoured Hagelslag or most perplexing of all – anise seed (licorice seed) Hagelslag.

The latter is reserved for celebrating the birth of a baby and is fondly referred to as Muisjes (yep, "mice").

They take a Dutch Beschuit (a twice baked piece of round toast), slap on some butter and adorn with either pink (for a girl) or blue (for a boy) anise Hagelslag and serve with Coffee to guests visiting the new baby – an important old, if not odd, Dutch tradition.

My former Dutch boss once tried, mumbling and steeped in male-embarrassment, to explain how the tradition came about as anise seed can shrink a woman's womb. I didn't dare ask why feed it to the guests then... According to our good friend Mr. Wikipedia: "The anise in the muisjes is thought to be good for stimulating lactation and was purported to scare away evil spirits." It's good to hear the tradition is rooted in some sort of logic...and Orange Muisjes were sold en-masse for one week in December 2003, to honour the birth of Crown Princess Amalia.

To put all this sprinkle-eating madness into perspective, I will share with you a little-known fact: "Dutch people are said to consume over 14 million kilos of Hagelslag each year. Yes — 14 million kilos — do you know what that means? That's roughly the combined weight of 1,000 adult elephants!" (Aren't facts always funnier when measured by elephants??)

Personally, I can do without these colourful sprinkly meals, but if these sugar-filled morning treats bring a smile to a Dutch person's face, then I'm all for it. Heck, what else is going to make you smile on a rainy Dutch winter's day?!

LET'S TALK ABOUT
HAGELSLAG

Hagelslag was invented by the Dutch company Venz in 1936. (Unconfirmed) legend has it that the owner got the idea from letters from a five-year old boy, asking for a chocolate bread topping.

The battles against the water by the Dutch

The Storm-Tide that came during the night.

(A translation of a book by P.A De Rover entitled “In Nacht en Stormgetij”.)

The Dike

Can you hear the wind?

Through the dark night it comes, driving along in great haste.

He comes from far over the sea. There is nothing that will stop him in his speed. He tosses and turns in that water. He makes the waves as high as houses.

The waves always do what the wind wants. He hurries them along in front of him.

Forwards, they must move forwards, the waves, forever forwards by the wild wind.

Somewhere, lost in the darkness of the night, lies the dike, the heavily fortified sea dike.

The strong gusts of wind drives the waves up against the dikes.

Ha! These storm gusts hate the dikes. They must be destroyed.

The waves will destroy them by bashing and battering them.

The dike is laughing at the waves. Let them bash and batter against my flanks. Let the storm gusts stir up the waves and throw themselves against the dike. He laughs about it. He is strong.

Sometimes it vibrates a bit once a heavy wave strikes up against it. But all the waves blow themselves into smithereens.

The dike lies there as a true protector over the wide and low-lying land and over the people and livestock and other animals that live there.....

A story about a family struck by the Storm-tide of 31 January 1953 to 1 February 1953.

Gert Gakéér is lying in his “Bedstee” (Box bed) in the dark attic. He can’t sleep. He had been restless all day. At school this morning, he had to stand in the corner. This afternoon he pestered his sister Neeltje and her girlfriend Corrie that much, that in the end his Mum said: “Go along, you go upstairs and you’re not coming downstairs again.”

Neeltje & Corrie were playing school. Neeltje was the teacher and Corrie was sitting on a milking stool, which served as a desk in class. The teacher came and sat next to Corrie also on a milking stool. Gert kicked the milking stool so that the teacher rolled into the mud. That wasn’t very nice of Gert. The teacher began to cry and went to her Mum. And Mum said; “Go along, you get upstairs.”

Now Gert is lying in his bedstee in the dark attic, and he can’t get to sleep. He’s listening to the wind.

The wind are gusting around the farm. They’re like ghosts whirling around the roof. Every so often they are pulling on the roof tiles, lifting them up and then dumping them back on their wooden battens. Gert isn't afraid even though he is only ten years old. But the way the wind is blowing tonight, no, this is something he has never witnessed before.

The battles against the water by the Dutch

He was thinking about Dirk Onwijn, his friend, with whom he plays all the time. Dirk's father is a farmhand with his father. Dirk is his trusted mate. Together they go to Mr Schout at school. They play together in the hay in the big new stable, which has been built onto their home. In that stable there are sixty cows. It is always nice and warm in the hay above the cows. During the Summer they always ride on top of the hay wagons. You are lying down on a nice feed of hay, high and dry, and you softly swing from side to side. In Springtime they help bring manure to the fields. They are allowed to drive the brown one, which is a quiet brown horse. They are then real Farmhands. Dad doesn't want them to drive the black horse. It is still young and a bit skittish. You never know! If it is startled it could bolt in fright and then

The driving of the manure will come again soon. What day is it again today? Oh. Yes, it is the 31st January. Of course, this morning we sang our National Anthem "Wilhelmus" and Mr Schouten told us about the Princesses.

It's Saturday night right now. Tomorrow it will be Sunday. No work will be carried out on the farm that day. Of course, the livestock has to be fed. Also, the cows have to be milked. That goes without saying.

Tomorrow morning, we ride to the Church with the black one in front. Then, the school lies deserted next to the Church. Then, from all directions, all the men come along in their black suits and the women with their white laced hats. The boys wear their Sunday Best suit on and the girls their Sunday best skirt. That's when they walk, not running or chasing, across the Church square, quietly next to Mum & Dad. Do you hear the wind?

Here comes another wind gust. It rages through the trees on the farm. He is pulling again on the roof tiles. Wow, it is as if he just pulled some roof tiles loose. And yes, they fell on the bricks below next to the house, all in broken pieces. Gert is now becoming a little bit afraid, all alone in the big attic. Should he go downstairs? Go to his Mum & Dad? But they are already in bed. They are sleeping in the big bedstee in the upstairs bedroom. Neeltje was allowed to sleep with them. She was scared. But Gert? He didn't want to be scared. But isn't he a boy? And boys don't get scared, do they? Neeltje is a girl, and she is only 7 years old. And Mientje, his youngest sister, is only 2 years old. She is asleep of course in a small cot in the upstairs bedroom. She won't hear a thing from these stormy winds. Oh, how Gert wished he were just as small, so that he too would be asleep now and these gusty winds wouldn't bother him at all. Should he go downstairs? "No," he heard himself say half loudly. "No" and he pulled his blankets over his head. Now I will hardly hear the wind. What would Dirk be doing right now? Would he be asleep? What about his Mum & Dad? And Corrie his sister? And his little brother Bram? Dirk lives close to the Dike. Gert lives some distance away from the Dike. Dirk probably can hear the waves thrashing up against the Dike. Gert can't. "Come on, no more thinking, Go to sleep." He tells himself. No, no more thinking. It is as if the raging of the storm gusts are sounding further away. As if the gusts are going further away further away... until they have totally gone. Gert is asleep. But the attacks on the Dike by the waves intensifies. The Dike vibrates under this attack. Giving way to these waves, no, that the Dike will not do. Never!!

The U18th have done very well.

Summary:

With 5 games left in the season, the U18s have gone 1 point clear at the top of the table.

The reserves are still in contention for a top 4 finish.

Unfortunately the season has not gone as planned for the 1st team. Numerous season ending injuries and player unavailability, has made it a difficult season. The team has been competitive in the majority of their games, so the Club is very optimistic about moving forward next season with a number of high profile recruits already being spoken to.

Exhibition: Duyfken–25 years later

Exhibition: The History of Wooden Boat Building in WA. 25 years of Duyfken Replica.

The Duyfken 1606 Replica Foundation, folded on the 30th of June 2021. It was founded on February 25th of 1995 at the Maritime Museum in Fremantle. After so many years, this was the end of a voyage that started with an idea in 1993.

The idea to build an authentic replica of the Duyfken was hatched by local historian Michael Young and driven by a passionate group of Western Australian maritime enthusiasts.

The replica was built to counter two of Australia's popular historical myths;

Dirk Hartog was the first European to step ashore in Australia and Captain Cook discovered Australia.

The group of enthusiasts ultimately became the Duyfken 1606 Replica Foundation under the leadership of Michael G. Kailis, who was instrumental in helping raise $3.5 million for the project. Immense interest was generated throughout the Western Australia Community and thousands of people helped to support the project, either financially or with hands-on help.

Friends of the Duyfken and the Duyfken 1606 Club represented the wider Community and Business supporters. Among that group was Duyfken Foundation chairman Rinze Brandsma, Board Member Charlie Welker and Project Director Graeme Cocks.

Funding was provided by the Governments of the Netherlands, Western Australia, Queensland, and Australia as well as the Lotteries Commission of WA, private donors, the MG Kailis Group of Companies and a whole raft of other Companies and Members of the Community, especially the Dutch Community, many of those were or are Members of the Dutch Club Neerlandia.

During construction, volunteers assisted professional shipwrights, while volunteer guides showed people over the ship as she was being built.

The book that inspired Michael Young to build the replica of the Duyfken is the book: "The first recorded European ship that visited the Coast of Australia", written by Priscilla Murdoch.

That book will be one of the many amazing objects, models, photo's, art and memorabilia, that will be on display during the special Exhibition at the end of this year in the Shipwrecks Gallery. It is all about the history of wooden boat building in WA and Duyfken replica.

The Exhibition will run from the 3th of December 2021 until the 30th of April 2022 in the Shipwrecks Gallery in Fremantle and will be open 7 days a week and it is supported by DAF.

[Dutch Australian Foundation] and the City of Fremantle [Arts Grants Funding] and the Embassy of the Kingdom of the Netherlands in Australia.

The August Sunday Drive.

On Sunday the 8th of August we once again held our Sunday Klaverjas Drive.

The starting time of our event was set 30 minutes earlier than usual, as the Karl's Bar is required in the afternoon. This time around we had 14 players, not enough for 4 tables of 4 players. However, this problem was easily solved as Piet & Joke Leeftang shared one spot (two games each instead of 4), as did Murray Koedyk and Jan Zwartkruis.

After a cup of Coffee and a Cake, the competition started in earnest. After 2 games had been played, it was time for another cup of Coffee and lunch, which this time was a: "Broodje gezond".

After 4 games had been completed, the score sheets were checked and the prize winners were declared as follows:

1st: Gerda van Noort 6789 points
2nd: Piet Segers 6563 points
3rd: Henk Smit 6472 points

Our next Sunday Drive will be held on Sunday the 12th of September. Piet Leeftang.

The winners ltr: Henk Smit 3rd; Gerda van Noort 1st, and Piet Segers 2nd.

Boss I need a raise.

I recently went into my boss and told her: "Three companies are after me. I need a raise, if you want me to stay in my job." We haggled for a bit, then she gave me a 5% raise.

As I was leaving her office, she said: "Out of curiosity, can you tell me what three companies were interested in you?"

"Sure," I responded: "The Electricity, the Water and the Internet/Phone company."

Those innocent little children.

Grandpa died. To break the news gently to her four-year-old daughter, the mother said: "Honey,

Grandpa has passed away and has gone to a happier place.

It's just like what happened to your goldfish."

The granddaughter looked a bit sad and then replied: "Does that mean we're going to flush him down the toilet too?"

The secret to a long life.

A young man met a cowboy who was 104, still active and in good health. He asked the old-timer what the secret was to his longevity.

May a bit of Humour light up your Day

The old man said: “You got to sprinkle a little gunpowder on your porridge every morning. If you do that, you’ll live to a nice, ripe old age.”

So the young man did this religiously every day for the rest of his life and, sure enough, lived to the age of just over 100.

When he died, he left behind six children, 10 grandchildren, 56 great-grandchildren... and a 16-foot hole in the wall of the crematorium.

A recently married man joins a soccer team.

A man joins a soccer team and his new teammates inform him: “At your first team dinner as the new guy, you will have to give us a talk about sex.”

The evening arrives and he gives a detailed, humorous account of his sex life. When he gets home, his wife asks how the evening went and — not wanting to lie but also not wanting to explain exactly what happened — he said: “Oh, I had to do a talk about yachting.”

His wife thought this a little peculiar, but said nothing more and went to sleep.

The next day she bumped into one of his new teammates at the supermarket and asked: “I heard my husband had to make a speech last night. How did it go?”

His mate said smiling: “Oh, it was excellent! Your husband is clearly very experienced!”

The wife looked confused and replied to his mate: “Strange, he has only done it twice and the second time it made him sick.”

The last Supper.

Three prisoners are on Death Row about to be executed. They are asked what they would like as their last meal.

One man asks for his favourite Pizza.

This is served to him and then taken away.

The next man goes rather lavishly and asks for Filet Mignon. He is served this dish, which he enjoys to the very last morsel, and is then taken away.

The last man requests a plate of strawberries. The guards are rather surprised and had to seek clarification, asking: “Strawberries?”

The prisoner replies: “Yes, Strawberries!”

The guards replied: “Are you sure? They are out of season!”

The prisoner replies: “That’s OK, I’ll wait.”

Paddy’s dog escapes.

Paddy is extremely upset when his dog jumped the fence and ran away.

His wife says to him: “Paddy, why don’t you put an ad in the local paper?”

Paddy thinks that is a great idea, so he does that.

When Paddy had not received any response to the ad in weeks, his wife suddenly asked him: “What did you put in the ad for our missing dog, Paddy?”

“Oh, I used something he responds to readily - Here Boy!”

Stavoren, one of the 11 Fountain Cities in Friesland

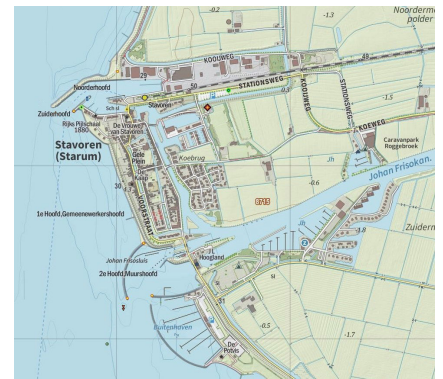

Flag & Coat of Arms of Stavoren.

Stavoren, is a City in the Province of Friesland, The Netherlands, on the coast of the IJsselmeer, about 5 km south of Hindeloopen, in the Municipality of Súdwest-Fryslân.

Stavoren has a population of just over 1000.

It is one of the stops on the Elfstedentocht (the 11 Cities Ice Skating Race) which was featured in our last magazine.

These very same 11 Cities have recently (2020) installed remarkable fountains in the centre of their Cities. Each of them is a work of art in its own right and worth seeing.

This followed a worldwide competition for artists to design those 11 fountains. We do not have the room to publish photos of them all, but at the bottom of the pages there are some photos, their name and location.

History:

The historical Town of Stavoren was granted City rights between 1060 and 1067, making it the oldest City in Friesland.

The place was built around the year 900 on a watercourse and gained City rights.

Stavoren had good trade relations with the Countries around the Baltic Sea through the importation of grain, which was needed for the rapidly growing Frisian population, but never achieved the status and wealth of the North Dutch Cities on the Western shore of the IJsselmeer.

In the early days the Frisian Kings resided here. It is mentioned in early texts as the burial place of the early Kings of Friesland, including the first Christian King Adgil II (d. 730), who was a son of Redbad, the last pagan King, who lived from about 670 to 719.

At the end of the Middle Ages, Stavoren fell into disrepair, after a sandbank formed outside the harbour, blocking ships from entering and leaving.

In 1657, the entire City was submerged in a great flood.

In the 17th and 18th centuries, the City got better before it went into decline again in the 19th century.

Transport:

In 1899, the place had 868 inhabitants. After the construction of the Stavoren-Leeuwarden railway and the establishment of a ferry connection to Enkhuizen on the other side of the IJsselmeer, with a connection to the Zaandam / Enkhuizen Amsterdam railway, the port of Stavoren gained in importance again.

Tourism:

Today the place lives mainly from tourism, which is almost completely oriented towards water sports. It has become one of the Town's main sources of income. Several marinas were built on the outskirts.

The appearance of the sandbank is the topic of the Dutch Renaissance folk-tale of the Lady of Stavoren. It is one of the most famous legends of Dutch folk literature about the medieval character: "Wyfke fan Starum" (Dutch: Vrouwe van Stavoren).

This Tale dates from the 16th century and is roughly as follows:

In the Middle Ages, the widow of a very wealthy merchant lived in Stavoren. The haughty woman owned more ships than all the other merchants and shipowners in the City combined, and her wealth grew day by day.

Despite her great wealth, she was not satisfied. She desired to have the most precious possession in the world and sent the captain of one of her ships out to get it for her.

After a long journey to Danzig, he found the best wheat he had ever seen. He returned with this wheat.

But the merchant's widow had imagined other treasures. Angry she asked the captain: "On which side did you have the wheat loaded?" He replied: "On the port side". Thereupon she ordered the skipper to dump the cargo on the starboard side back into the sea. A bystander heard this and prophesied that one day she would have to beg out of poverty. Then she pulled a precious gold ring from her finger and threw the piece of jewelry into the sea as well. She added: "As little as this golden ring will ever return to me, so little will I ever suffer poverty".

A short time later, the haughty woman's maid found the ring in a fish, that she was preparing for lunch. The mistress was very frightened. Then she learned that same evening that several of her ships had sunk, "with man and mouse", in a storm on the high seas. Her misery never ended and the woman died a poor beggar.

The Frouwesân (women's sand), a sandbank in the IJsselmeer near Stavoren, is said to be the place where the precious wheat was thrown into the sea.

A plant that looks like wheat but has no ears of corn is said to still grow here.

A statue of the "Wyfke fan Stavoren" has stood in the Town centre of Stavoren since 1969.
